The report added, quoting Dr. North, "It is nevertheless an unpleasant factor because this pain interferes with the president's rest."

The bulletin also said Dr.

The bulletin also said Dr. emphasized "that the overnight troubles are more troublesome from the standpoint of restlessness than anything else, retierating that anything which disturbs the president's sleep is 'obviously something we want to control.'

Doctors are watching Johnson very closely because of his massive heart attack in 1965 from which he recovered completely.
"An electrocardiogram taken

POLLUTION SOLUTION

A recent survey shows that the greatest cause for concern among the American people, after taxes and inflation, is the problem of pollution and conservation the preservation of our life-supporting environment. And well it is. It took 300 years for our population to reach 100 million people. In the last fifty years, - from 1920 to 1970 - our U.S.A. population doubled, to 200 million.

As we have grown, so have our demands for housing, industry, heat, power and transportation; and right alongside we produce a like amount of smoke, fumes, and luck. Upset the balance of nature, nd we are in trouble- as we are beginning to learn.

It is good that our lawmakers now recognize the threat posed by pollution. But we can be doublely grateful that a vitally important segment of our business community anticipated the problem of our environment, and began to take action, years ago.

BACK TO THE BARGAINING TABLE

"We have no eternal allies and we have no perpetual enemies," Lord Palmerston once said of Victorian Britain. "Our interests are eternal." This maxim seems to be the guiding theme of both the Nixon administration and Mao Tse-tung regime as they approach a new meeting in Warsaw set for Friday, Feb. 20. The major significance of the U.S. - Red China session is that it comes only a month after a new round of talks was launched following a two- year suspension. During the previous round, six tired of hearing: months or more often elapsed between encounters.

The fact that the meeting -- 136th in the series-- is being held may be more important than anything said at any better than the last one, you the bargaining table in the early stages of the won't be around here very ambassadorial- level talks to be held by the U.S. envoy to long."

By mutual agreement, the substance of the talks is being kept secret. But the word from the Polish capital is tricks on Wilbur. The U.S. offered exchanges of tourists, businessmen, students and newsmen, as well as new trade and financial proposals. The Chinese are said kid. to have sought further political negotiations, aimed at achieving an agreement on peaceful co-existence.

No one is proclaiming the talks a success. Peking's call or peaceful co- existence also raised the question of what would happen to the Nationalist regime on Taiwan to arouse the suspicions of the Soviet Union that a new alliance is being formed against her. In the words of the Chinese proverb, "A journey of a thousand miles must begin with a single step."

FOREIGN VISITORS MAY LIKE AMERICA, BUT THEY MISS THEIR 'SYMBOL SIGNS'

Last year, American tourists spent $3.98 billion in foreign lands. Foreigners visiting the United States spend about half as much, $2 billion, here. That left a balance of payments deficit of $1.98 billion in the area of personal travel, alone, which Uncle Sam would like to cut

To do this, the United States Travel Service of the Department of Commerce has undertaken the largest foreign advertising and promotion program in its history designed to bring overseas tourists to America shows. The basic pitch is "it doesn't cost as much as you may think."

Americans who take to the highways when they travel abroad are invariably thankful for one thing: An international system of highway signs which always convey the same meaning regardless of the nation they

They are called "symbol signs." They convey their meaning by pictures. A knowledge of the local language a country (and Americans are notoriously poor linguists) is not necessary to understand them. The same basic signs are in use throughout the world- except in the United States. One can only guess at how many thousands of highway accidents they have prevented.

Foreign visitors in America, however, have no such confusion. In some instances, a foreign visitor driving on an American highway can actually be endangering himself

Lately, however, U.S. traffic and signing engineers are taking an increasing interest in symbol signs.

The Boston Redevelopment Authority, for instance, recently installed more than 300 of them in the downtown area as an experiment to test their effectiveness in helping the city's traffic flow. Baltimore County authorities have posted European- type picture signs at some school zones. They feature white silhouettes of two walking children on a blue background, replacing the conventional yellow diamond background with the words "School Crossing" lettered in

The symbol sign concept got strong support, recently, when the American Medical Association recommended

Left Home, Family and Security For Filth, Lice and Decaying Teeth

Dear Ann Landers: Three years ago I left a wonderful home, great parents, and loving brothers and sisters. I wanted to "find myself." My folks were heartsick but I was sure it was something I had to do.

I found myself all right. Sleeping in parks, eating garbage, making the scene from California to New York, wherever my thumb could take me. I can tell you all about group sex, Woodstock, pot and stronger stuff. I can also tell you about decaying teeth, filthy clothes, lice, and what it's like to be so zonked you don't know where you are for days at a time. Can you imagine all this condition in the complete of business at a meeting of boy he is not the bird described by he is not the bird and the that J. R. had treated ther just as J.R. A. Different Woods Need Different Treatment By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—Being a man who works with all kinds f wood, I would like to answer Mrs. M. M.'s question about how to preserve new wood to keep it from cracking If the wood is new, is good and dry or well-cured, you can-brush linseed oil into the wood grain. Use one or more applications—MR. M. N. G.

DEAR MRS. M. M. and other readers-After discussing this with several lumbermen I learned that there is no 100 per cent guarantee for this. Different types of wood rec different treatments. They all contract and expand and the moisture content is one determining factor concerning cracking. Linseed oil is good in many cases. Also, where the wood is being used and for what make a difference. Mrs. M. M.'s question was very general and a more accurate answer has to be based on more specific information. tion.-POLLY

Polly's Prc' 'em

DEAR POLLY-I have a he sand and three nearly grown sons so have accumulated quite a supply of Orlon socks with worn-out feet but perfectly good legs. Can someone tell me how to use these socks to make some useful item, such as a door mat, small rug, chair pad or the like?—MRS. D. F. W. Sr.

DEAR POLLY-I am sure there must be others who hate to wash dry dust mops as much as I do. Now I take a dust cloth about 20 inches square, spread it on a table and put three paper towels. on top of the other, in the center of the cloth and set the mop on top of the towels. Fasten the four corners of the dust cloth around the handle of the mop with safety pins. After floors are dusted all that is needed is to wash the dust cloth. This is certainly easier than washing the mop. The paper towels keep the dirt from getting through to the mop.—EVA

CAPE GIRARDEU - A 10week, non-credit reading efficiency course will be offered Reading Clinic Southeast Missouri State College, beginning March 11.

The course, which will meet from 7-9 each Wednesday evening through May 20, will be taught by Donald L. Hunt, instructor of education and psychology. Hunt said the course will include concentrated activities to improve word recognition, meaning, idea reading, study reading, phrase reading, exploratory reading, and entence meaning.

He added the course is not a remedial reading course for the correction of reading disabilities, but rather its premise is to sustain and extend reading skills needed by persons who are required to do extensive reading. It is specifically designed, he said, for senior high school students, college students, and adults.

Among the habits which the course is designed to try and enable the reader to eliminate are vocalizing, number attraction, word by word reading, word blocking, monotonous plodding, finger following, head swinging, back tracking, rereading, and

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that while there could be little doubt that Bert's son has suffered from his father's act, to allow a person to collect damages in an action for creating a "wrongful life" would result in consequences too far reaching. Gains Almost Nil In Limited Wars

By BRUCE BIOSSAT NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (NEA Guam doctrine and "lowered U.S. profile" not-withstanding, President Nixon really cannot be totally sure that this country can avoid limited wars like those in Korea and Vietnam. But the prospect of avoidance may be quite good.

He is telling us again, of course, that he wants "no more Vietnams." And it is hard to imagine any successor president saying he approves such involvement War breeds many sorts of disillusionment. I am talking here of just one kind—the realization that it is difficult if not impossible to gain even the limited objectives a nation fixes for itself in limited war.

In Korea we had a very close call. When Chinese Red armies in late 1950 and early 1951 drove U.S.-U.N. forces out of North Korea and deep into South Korea, our highest leaders gravely weighed the possibility of getting out and leaving the South Koreans to a sad fate. One of this century's great military commanders, Gen.

Matthew B. Ridgway, largely saved the day. He rallied our demoralized forces and led them back northward to a tough defense line, most of it well into North Korea. By that effort he gained us our original objective-to-repel the invader from South Korea. Since we achieved that, and a certain amount of enemy real estate useful for defense, we had a small "victory

Yet we gave up all thought of chasing the Reds out of North Korea, as we briefly dreamed of doing before Red China's entry interrupted Gen. Douglas MacArthur's pursuit of tattered North Korean forces.

Ridgway, a shrewd judge, says we could have stormed back to the Chinese-North Korean line at the Yalu river where we once had stood. But he and all top U.S. officials

In intense exchanges in the spring of 1951, as we smashed northward, our leaders decided the cost of such a drive was too great in men, money, and danger of a widened war.

Some rough parallels exist between those talks and the March, 1968, conferences wherein we weighed our military's request for 206,000 more troops for Vietnam. In both instances, heavy attention was given to the burdens the added effort would lay upon the home front in taxes, controls, and personal anguish over casualties.

Still, there was one big difference. Ridgway, persuasive as a winning commander, could point to a realizable goal. The generals who argued for more troops in 1968 could promise nothing even faintly clear. Clark Clifford, then defense secretary, decided the increase would be at once futile and a brutal burden. His negative weight was crucial

When Lyndon Johnson reluctantly fixed the troop ceiling at 550,000 we were at the turning point in Vietnam war. It meant, unmistakably, that we had given up our chief goal in that limited war-to force, mostly by our own combined strength, the defeat of the Viet Cong and the retreat of North Vietnamese regulars from South Vietnam's soil. Yet, even if something is salvaged in South Vietnam, our frustrations must be lastingly deep. Limited war, for us seems to skirt too close to failure. Who could want it again?

Georges August Escof-'king of chefs and chef of kings." claimed to have varied his regal menus with some 10,000 recipes, including 213 soups, 189 chicken dishes and 143 things done with eggs. The World Almanac says. In 1894, after hearing Nellie Melba sing Elsa in 'Lohengrin." he created his most famous taste sensation, Peach Melba, a medley of peaches, vanilla

syrup, vanilla ice cream

Johnson Has Bad Night

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP (Former President Lyndon B. Johnson experienced a night," and was awakened several times by pains in the chest and left arm, doctors reported today.

A medical bulletin said Lt.

Col. Robert North "reported the pain is not associated with any change in the president's heart sounds, vital signs or electrocardiogram."

The report added, quoting
Dr. North, "It is nevertheless an unpleasant factor because this interferes with president's rest."

The bulletin also said Dr.

North emphasized "that the overnight troubles are more troublesome from the standpoint of restlessness than anything else, retierating that anything which disturbs the president's sleep is 'obviously something we want to control.

Doctors are watching Johnson very closely because of his massive heart attack in 1965 which he recovered completely.
'An electrocardiogram taken at 10 a.m. shows no significant change from yesterday's tracing, Dr. North said," the bulletin reported.

Doctors reported Johnson had "only rare premature contractions" —extra heart beats-during the past 24 hours. "His lab studies have continued to remain within normal limits," said the bulletin, which was delayed 40 minutes.

POLLUTION SOLUTION

A recent survey shows that the greatest cause for concern among the American people, after taxes and inflation, is the problem of pollution and conservation the preservation of our life-supporting environment. And well it is. It took 300 years for our population to reach 100 million people. In the last fifty years, - from 1920 to 1970 - our U.S.A. population doubled, to 200 million.

As we have grown, so have our demands for housing, industry, heat, power and transportation; and right alongside we produce a like amount of smoke, fumes, and just plain junk. There are ominous signs that mother nature simply hasn't been able to absorb this huge onslaught. Our topsoil, our air, and our water- all are delicately balanced mixtures of life-supporting elements. Upset the balance of nature, nd we are in trouble- as we are beginning to learn.

It is good that our lawmakers now recognize the threat posed by pollution. But we can be doublely grateful that a vitally important segment of our business community anticipated the problem of our environment, and began to take action, years ago.

Visualize, if you will, a scene on the cover of the annual report of a natural gas company - Texas Eastern Transmission Corporation - which recently crossed our desk. It shows a serene, rich meadow thick with grass. Cows graze; trees grow; a clear stream is nearby. The only "odd" part of the picture is a few barely noticeable orange markers- the only sign that underneath the ground are three huge, steel, fiberglass covered pipelines, from 30 single day flows 1.5 billion cubic feet of natural gasindependence from Great Britain understand the lyrics or white many payments set in.

BACK TO THE BARGAINING TABLE

"We have no eternal allies and we have no perpetual enemies," Lord Palmerston once said of Victorian Britain. "Our interests are eternal." FOREIGN VISITORS MAY LIKE AMERICA, BUT THEY MISS THEIR 'SYMBOL SIGNS'

Last year, American tourists spent $3.98 billion in foreign lands. Foreigners visiting the United States spend about half as much, $2 billion, here. That left a balance of payments deficit of $1.98 billion in the area of personal travel, alone, which Uncle Sam would like to cut

To do this, the United States Travel Service of the Department of Commerce has undertaken the largest foreign advertising and promotion program in its history designed to bring overseas tourists to America shows. The ic pitch is "it doesn't cost as much as you may think."

Americans who take to the highways when they travel abroad are invariably thankful for one thing: An international system of highway signs which always convey the same meaning regardless of the nation they

They are called "symbol signs." They convey their meaning by pictures. A knowledge of the local language a country (and Americans are notoriously poor linguists) is not necessary to understand them. The same basic signs are in use throughout the world- except in the United States. One can only guess at how many thousands of highway accidents they have prevented.

Foreign visitors in America, however, have no such luck. Unless they know how to read English (as opposed to speaking it) our road signs are surely a source of confusion. In some instances, a foreign visitor driving on an American highway can actually be endangering himself and others because he can't read the signs.

Lately, however, U.S. traffic and signing engineers are taking an increasing interest in symbol signs.

The Boston Redevelopment Authority, for instance, recently installed more than 300 of them in the downtown area as an experiment to test their effectiveness in helping the city's traffic flow. Baltimore County authorities have posted European- type picture signs at some school zones. They feature white silhouettes of two walking children on a blue background, replacing the conventional yellow diamond background with the words "School Crossing" lettered in black. Symbol signs are also in use, or are being tested, in Wilmington, N.C., and in Tampa and Miami, Fla.

Different Woods Need Different Treatment

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—Being a man who works with all kinds of wood, I would like to answer Mrs. M. M.'s question about how to preserve new wood to keep it from cracking. If the wood is new, is good and dry or well-cured, you can brush linseed oil into the wood grain. Use one or more applications—MR. M. N. G.

DEAR MRS. M. M. and other readers—After discussing this with several lumbermen I learned that there is no 100 per cent guarantee for this. Different types of wood require different treatments. They all contract and expand and the moisture content is one determining factor concerning cracking. Linseed oil is good in many cases. Also, where wood is being used and for what make a difference. Mrs. M. M.'s question was very general and a more ac curate answer has to be based on more specific information.-POLLY

CAPE GIRARDEU - A 10week, non-credit reading efficiency course will be offered the Reading Clinic

Southeast Missouri State College, beginning March 11. The course, which will meet from 7-9 each Wednesday evening through May 20, will be taught by Donald L. Hunt, instructor of education and psychology.

Hunt said the course will include concentrated activities to improve word recognition, meaning, idea reading, study reading, phrase reading, exploratory reading, and ntence meaning.

He added the course is not a remedial reading course for the correction of reading disabilities, but rather its premise is to sustain and extend reading skills needed by persons who are required to do extensive reading. It is specifically designed, he said, for senior high school students, college students, and

Among the habits which the course is designed to try and enable the reader to eliminate are vocalizing, number attraction, word by word reading, word blocking, monotonous plodding, finger following, head swinging, back tracking, rereading, and

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that while there could be little doubt that Bert's son has suffered from his father's act, to allow a person to collect damages in an action for father's act, to allow a person to collect damages in an action for creating a "wrongful life" would result in consequences too far reaching. People born into the world under conditions considered by them to be adverse would start lawsuits for various and diverse reasons. They might seek damages for being born a certain color, for being born into a disadvantaged race, for being born with wheelmen.

America's increasing pro-ductivity of durable goods is accompanied by an ex-plosion of disposable goods and throw-away packaging. The amount of rubbish the average American gets rid of daily, The World Alma-nac says, has increased from 2 pounds in 1940 to 4 to 5 pounds today, a rate of growth greater than that of the population. One day's garbage in the United States would fill a freight train 219 miles long.

Gains Almost Nil In Limited Wars

By BRUCE BIOSSAT NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (NEA Guam doctrine and "lowered U.S. profile" not-withstanding, President Nixon really cannot be totally sure that this country can avoid limited wars like those in Korea and Vietnam. But the prospect of avoidance may be quite good.

He is telling us again, of course, that he wants "no more Vietnams." And it is hard to imagine any successor president saying he approves such involvement War breeds many sorts of disillusionment. I am talking here of just one kind—the realization that it is difficult if not impossible to gain even the limited objectives a nation fixes for itself in limited war. In Korea we had a very close call. When Chinese Red armies in late 1950 and early 1951 drove U.S.-U.N. forces out of North Korea and deep into South Korea, our highest leaders gravely weighed the possibility of getting out and leaving the South Koreans to a sad fate.

One of this century's great military commanders, Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, largely saved the day. He rallied our demoralized forces and led them back northward to a tough defense line, most of it well into North Korea. By that effort he gained us our original objective—to repel the invader from South Korea. Since we achieved that, and a certain amount of enemy real estate useful for defense, we had a small "victory. Yet we gave up all thought of chasing the Reds out of North Korea, as we briefly dreamed of doing before Red China's entry interrupted Gen. Douglas MacArthur's pursuit of tattered North Korean forces Ridgway, a shrewd judge, says we could have stormed back to the Chinese-North Korean line at the Yalu river where we once had stood. But he and all top U.S. officials

In intense exchanges in the spring of 1951, as we smashed northward, our leaders decided the cost of such a drive was too great in men, money, and danger of a widened war.

Some rough parallels exist between those talks and the March, 1968, conferences wherein we weighed our military's request for 206,000 more troops for Vietnam. In both instances, heavy attention was given to the burdens the added effort would lay upon the home front in taxes, controls, and personal anguish over casualties.

Still, there was one big difference. Ridgway, persuasive as a winning commander, could point to a realizable goal. The generals who argued for more troops in 1968 could promise nothing even faintly clear. Clark Clifford, then defense secretary, decided the increase would be at once futile and a brutal burden. His negative weight was crucial. When Lyndon Johnson reluctantly fixed the troop ceiling at 550,000 we were at the turning point in Vietnam war. It meant, unmistakably, that we had given up our chief goal in that limited war-to force, mostly by our own combined strength, the defeat of the Viet Cong and the retreat of North Vietnamese regulars from South Vietnam's soil. Yet, even if something is salvaged in South Vietnam, our frustrations must be lastingly deep. Limited war, for us seems to skirt too close to failure. Who could want it again
